Processed with ancient, ancestral gestures, Anghelu Ruju is made from native grapes left to dry in the sun for 15-20 days, on suspended reed mats that are covered every night and in case of bad weather.

Fortified before its long ageing in casks, it is the authentic expression of its land or origin and owes its name to an archeological site discovered in 1903 on the premises of the estate. This extraordinarily versatile contemplation wine is an excellent match for cheese and chocolate. It features a garnet red color with orange highlights, and a bouquet with notes of blackberry jam and dried wild berries, as well as hints of tobacco and cocoa.

Very thick and soft to the palate, its spiced aftertaste is incomparably caressing.
